

Honorable Justice Alito,

I prepared a motion for certiorari that was docketed as Curtis J Neeley Jr. v NameMedia et al, (10-6091) but had discovered it would not be reviewed until October at the earliest. I have diligently attempted to use the existing legal processes for over a year. My 14 year-old daughter, whom I do not regularly communicate with but love, already expressed outrage that her father's name results in nude photos in image searches. She is teased about it at school.

The FCC has always had a DUTY to regulate WIRE COMMUNICATIONS. There are now several distinct issues before the court in the certiorari. Herein I specifically ask only that nudes not be allowed as result in searches by wire for my name whether done by me or not. The missing MORAL copyrights and the missing regulation of WIRE COMMUNICATION called the Internet warranted an EMERGENCY APPEAL and although I am NOT a prisoner and not on death-row the damage that could occur when any minor or any Muslim types my name into a search engine warrants a NARROW issue for a Writ of Mandamus because it only involves enforcing laws already on the books and being ignored or that have been unconstitutional for 221 years. The FCC is attempting to reclassify the Internet into telephone in obvious error or stretching for jurisdiction everywhere but where it has always obviously been. The United States should feel as embarrassed as I do when another country has to block our PORN WIRE COMMUNICATIONS to protect their children!

Respectfully and sincerely,

Curtis J Neeley Jr.
